2. Concall coverage

No recent concall transcripts exist: Screener lists only two investor meets (Jul 2022 and Dec 2023) under the old owner, Morgan Advanced Materials; the Dec 2023 transcript was read. This report is otherwise based on a web deep-dive (exchange notices and news on the change of control and rename) and Screener financials. No commentary from the new owner was found.

Business mix & capacity

- Domestic vs export: about 50-50 (Dec 2023 meet).
- Capacity: the Dec 2023 meet said the 'Avatar' expansion gave room to reach about Rs 250 cr of sales without big new investment, so the plant is well below that today. Utilization not disclosed.

3. Earning trigger thesis

The possible trigger is the new parent: Vesuvius (through Foseco India) owns the global Foseco foundry brand and now controls this plant, which could bring more volume through the Foseco network. The margin jump in the last two quarters fits that, but nobody from the new owner has explained the plan. The old management's growth plan (product moves from Germany, battery cathode containers, machine components) is no longer the stated strategy.

Trigger	What management said	Evidence so far	Time horizon	Strength
New parent: Foseco India / Vesuvius	No stated plan found	Margin 36-37% in Jun and Sep 2026 quarters; Sep quarter sales +15%	Unknown	Unproven
Spare capacity	Room to about Rs 250 cr of sales without big capex (Dec 2023)	Sales still around Rs 170-185 cr a year	Ongoing	Weak: not used yet
Battery cathode containers (old plan)	Patents filed, customer trials (Dec 2023)	No update found	Unknown	Unproven

3b. Trigger check

Trigger type	Yes/ No	What was said (date)
Debt cut	No	No debt
New business	No	Battery products were only a plan under the old owner
Margin up	No	Margin rose in the numbers but no stated reason was found
New management	Yes	Foseco India took control on 12 Nov 2025; board restructured and CFO resigned following the ownership change (news, 2025-26)
New capacity	No	Not stated
Big orders	No	Not applicable
Turnaround	No	Not applicable
Promoter buying	No	Change of promoter by share swap and an open offer, not promoter buying

Single concrete driver: A new parent, Foseco India of the Vesuvius group, controlling the plant since November 2025; its plans are not yet public.

3c. Margin bridge

Operating margin jumped to 36-37% in the Jun and Sep 2026 quarters from 28% a year ago. The company gave no reason. In Dec 2023 the old management said margins of the mid-twenties came from price increases, plant efficiency and easing raw material and freight costs, and warned against expecting more. With no explanation for the new jump, treat it as unproven (one-off).

3d. Management changes

Change of control: Foseco India Ltd (Vesuvius group) bought Morgan Advanced Materials' 75% stake, with control passing on 12 Nov 2025; the board was restructured and the CFO resigned after the ownership change. No statement of the new owner's plans was found.

4. Management consistency scorecard

Period	What was promised	What actually happened	Verdict
Dec 2023 meet	Climb toward Rs 250 cr sales in FY25 and Rs 300 cr soon after	FY25 Rs 174 cr, FY26 Rs 172 cr	Missed
Dec 2023 meet	Hold margins around then levels (mid-twenties)	FY25 24%, FY26 27%	Delivered
Dec 2023 meet	Move product lines from Germany; battery cathode containers	No update found; owner changed	Dropped / unknown

The old owner's growth plan didn't happen and the company was then sold. The new owner has set out no plan publicly, so there is nothing to test yet.

5. Bottom line

Durable earning trigger? → MAYBE

The change of parent plus a sharp margin and sales pick-up in the last two quarters hint at something, but no one has named a driver and there are no calls.

Management consistent? → MAYBE

The old management missed its sales target badly but kept margins as promised. The new owner has made no promises yet, so this is a reset rather than a record.

6. Checkpoints for next quarter

- Operating margin stays above a year ago in the December quarter
- Sales grow on a year ago again in the December quarter
- New owner sets out its plan for the company
